FINAL WORK ON THE TARIFF

Surmises as to the Senate's Action To-Day on the Reciprocity Amendments.

Mr. Aldrich's May Pass, but Mr. Sherman's Wil Fail-The Compound Lard Bill-Mr. Foster Not Anxious for a Foreign Mission.

THE TARIFF BILL.

Mr. Aldrich's Reciprocity Amendment May Be Adopted, but Mr. Sherman's Will Not. Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7 .- There will be several formal amendments offered to the tariff bill to-morrow, but with the exception of the sugar schedule and the reciprocity amendments the tariff bill has been practically disposed of by the Senate. It is not expected that there will be any material change in the measure during the next few days other than the adoption of the Aldrich amendment. So far as can be learned there will be but few votes in favor of the Sherman amendment. A few Eastern Republican Senators seem disposed to vote for the Sherman Canadian reciprocity proposi-tion, but the idea has not found general

It was stated this evening by a Republican member of the ways and means committee that there was little probability of any action of the House on the tariff bill until Speaker Reed has returned from Maine. As soon as the conference committee is appointed the main points of difference be-tween the House and the Senate will at once be taken up and settled in the least possible time. It is hoped that the conference committee will be able to report within one week after the first meeting. After the tariff bill has gone to conference the Senate intends to take up the remaining appropriation bills and the Supreme Court and bankruptcy bilis.

COMPOUND LARD BILL.

It Will Be Reported to the Senate Just as It Passed the House,

Special to the Indianapolis Journal WASHINGTON, Sept. 7 .- Some time this week a meeting of the Senate committee on agriculture will be held to take action upon the Conger compound lard bill, recently passed by the House. An effort was made to get the committee together yesterday, but a quorum failed to respond to the summons. When the bill was in the House many persons felt that what is known as the "Paddock pure-food bill" would be substituted for it by the Senate committee, of which Mr. Paddock is chairman, but the majority Senator says committee, agrees, believes that the House bill should be reported to the Senate so that both measures shall be laid before that body for its action. If a majority of the Senate think the general pure-food bill should be substituted for the Conger bill, they can so order, but the committee will let the Senate take the responsibility. Members of the committee say that while they believe the Paddock bill is the better one, and ought to be passed, there is such a demand for the Conger bill from the farmers' alliances and other agencies of the Northwest that they cannot refuse to give the bill a hearing in the Senate.

MINOR MATTERS.

Hon. John W. Foster Does Not Care for Office-His Views on Reciprocity.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.-Hon. John W. Foster, of Indiana, formerly United States minister to Spain, said to-day that the report that he had again been tendered the Spanish mission and that he would accept, provided a reciprocity amendment to the tariff bill were passed, was not true in any respect. He considered himself permanently out of public life. He was engaged in the practice of his profession, and thought that it was to his interest not to accept public office. It was true that he took an because he believed reciprocity with the countries south of us, producing products we do not raise in large quantities, was a simple question and one that could not but be to the interests of the United States. At the same time he did not think it neces-sary that he should take a part in carrying out this policy.

Fee System May Be Abolished. Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7 .- The investigation into the fee system, as abused in the federal courts throughout the country, has already brought to light such an array of facts that it begins to look as if there were really a posibility that this system would be wiped out, or at least robbed of many of its abuses, which it has fostered so thoroughly. The officers of the Treasury Department, who are most familiar with the Toledo; Dr. O. W. Nixon, of the Chicago working of the fee system, es revenue cases, are unanimously in favor of its abolition, and there is already a large party in Congress who are ready at any time to vote to abolish the system and substitute a definite scale of salaries for federal employes.

Feasibility of Reduced Postal Rates. Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

WASHINGTON, Sept 7 .- While Congress is in recess Postmaster-general Wanamaker will cause an investigation to be made into the present condition of postal transportation, with a view to ascertaining the possibility of a successful change of the rate of first-class mail matter from two to one

UNSATISFACTURY TO BANKS.

Many Refuse to Accept the New Uniform Bill of Lading as Collateral for Loans.

CHICAGO, Sept. 7 .- It transpires that the Eastern banking-houses are still unwilling to advance money on the new uniform bill | voices made clear the words: of lading, and many of them firmly refuse to accept it as collateral for drafts, notstanding the elimination of the non-negotiable provision. The reason for this is that its value as security is greatly impaired by other provisions, particularly the one which is designed to release the railroad from any liability for damage or loss of property during transportation. When the old form was in use the bankers knew that if the property which the paper repre-sented was destroyed in transit the shipper could recover from the carrier and thus meet his obligations, but the new form is especially intended to transfer this responsibility from the carrier to the shipper and leave the latter to take all risks. If anything were needed to complete the defeat of the new bill of lading this attitude of the banks would certainly be the finishing

So long as the Chicago & Grand Trunk and the Wabash decline to adopt it the roads that use it cannot expect to successfully compete with them, and it is not reasonable to suppose that they will continue to sacrifice their revenues in what now appears to be a hopeless fight. Gossip has it that the Lake Shore will probably return to its old bill of lading next week. It was President Newell, of the Lake Shore, who first recommended the striking out of the words "not negotiable," and it is well understood that he will not support a bill that is not bankable. Should the Lake Shore take the action expected of it there will, of course, be a stampede on the part of the other roads, and the new bill of lading will be left without a supporter in the Central Traffic Association.

Coal Merchant Murderously Assaulted.

He was about to continue his murderous work when Robert Dayton, one of Mr. Worth's drivers, who had been attracted by hearing Mr. Worth fall to the floor, rushed in and grappled with the assailant. A struggle ensued, but other help soon arrived and the would-be murderer was overpowered and placed in custody. It is feared that Mr. Worth will die of con-cussion of the brain. It is supposed that "William," who knew that Mr. Worth drew money Saturdays to pay off his men, intended to kill Mr. Worth and obtain the

HOPEFUL FOR THEIR RACE.

Wise Counsel Given by the Indiana Conference of the African Methodist Church.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. RICHMOND, Ind., Sept. 7 .- At the A. M. E. Conference, which closed its session in New Albany, Ind., last Tuesday, the report on the state of the country was placed in the hand of P. M. Lewis to be prepared for publication and for the minutes. The re port says: The civil and political conditions of our country were never purer or more just and right than they are to-day. To this statement, no doubt, some will take exceptions, because, in certain sections, certain classes of our people are deprived of many of their civil and political rights, and are further shamefully and cruelly abused. prived of many of their civil and political rights, and are, further, shamefully and cruelly abused and many foully murdered. But these circumstances, in certain secitions of our country, and practiced upon a minority of our people, do not prove the declarations of your committee false, but, on the contrary, the great uprising of just men and women with voice, pen, press and purse against those committing these outrages, and the further facts that all good and qualified citizen of every race under our general governcitizen of every race under our general govern-ment are being equally recognized and are re-ceiving equal shares of the offices at the hands ceiving equal shares of the offices at the hands of this government; and still further, inasmuch as the legislative departments of our general government are doing their best to enact laws to purify politics, and to secure to every citizen the enjoyment of all his civil rights, are abundant and overwhelming proofs of the truth of the committee's claims.

Your committee heartily indorses the present wise, statesmanlike and patriotic administration of President Harrison and his Cabinet. We commend Speaker Reed, Mr. McKinley and the Republican Congress for so much important legispublican Congress for so much important legislation already accomplished in the House this session in the interest of the whole people; and especially do we commend them for the passage of the "Lodge bill." We also commend Senator Hoar and others for their wisdom in securing an agreement to take a vote on said bill as early as possible in the Senate. Your committee condemns the outrageous con duct of certain classes of white people practiced upon all classes and the very best colored people in the world, in some of our Southern States. We recommend to our people constant labor in every branch of industry we can enter, and great economy. Get property, settle homes and make happy families. Strive to educate the race, and thereby have men and women intellectually qualified to fill with credit any useful position in this life and country. Do your whole duty as citizens of the United States, and on election days vote quietly, resolutely and honestly your sentiments and will, ever remembering the principles of the Republican party if you cannot always support the leaders of the occasion. Do not despair of the race's final success in common with the successes of others in a country and under a government founded, upheld and protected by a nation so nobleminded, honest, just and wise as the majority of the people of the United States. A nation the majority of whom are so excellent in every good trait and character, proficient in management and efficient in final results as this Nation of white people who as a majority upon their and efficient in final results as this Nation of white people, who, as a majority, upon their own accord rose up in the name of God and the right and gave their all and all, even their precious lives, to wipe the curse of slavery from their land and let all of the people be free and happy citizens, will, beyond a doubt, maintain its government and protect its citizens. There are thousands of white people in the Southern States who entertain and cherish the principles of this righteous majority, and the time is fast coming when those in the South will rise up in their might for the security of the rights to every citizen of the United States. The drift of many things in civil and political circles shows the correctness of these views.

things in civil and political circles shows the correctness of these views.

Therefore, let the colored people be active and constant in all good works, wise and just in dealings with all, resolute and constant in the defense of the right, and the full enjoyment of our citizenship will yet be a reality in these United States of America. Respectfully submitted.

BURIAL OF THE LATE GEN. NOYES.

impressive Ceremonies at Cincinnati Wit nessed by Many Friends of the Deceased.

CINCINNATI, Sept. 7 .- The funeral of the late Gen. Edward F. Noyes, this afternoon. though conducted with great simplicity, was the occasion of a large and varied attendance. His career, though covered by the years since the war of the rebellion began, took him in many fields of duty, and of his companions there were many from every field. Seldom has there been paid to any citizen such spontaneous tribute as that shown to-day by the number of hi friends, companions and acquaintances who came to testify their affection for the deceased. The services for the family and near relatives, of whom there are very few, as both Mr. and Mrs. Noyes are from the East, were held in the family residence and were very simple. A hymn by a quartet of voices was followed by the burial reading and a prayer by the Rev. Dudley W. Rhodes, rector of the Protestant Episcopal Church on Mount Auburn. Then the march was taken up to the Mount Auburn Presbyterian Church, where the public services were held. The honorary pall-bearers, among whom were ex-Inter Ocean; Dr. W. R. Thrall, Hon. J. I Peasto, Gen. M. F. Force, Gen. Charles T Brown, ex-Gov. John B. Neil, of Toledo; Judge F. W. Moore, Judge S. F. Hunt and Gen. A. Hickenlooper, of this city, stood in line, while eight members of the regiment which the deceased had commanded during the war bore the casket to the hearse. Surviving members of the regiment, bearing the old war flags, marched as a guard of honor beside the hearse. Following were the Ohio Commandery of the Loyal Legion, the Noves Post of Sons of Veterans and members of the bar of Hamilton county. The cortege was preceded to the church by the Grand Army of the Republic. At the church the Grand Army veterans and other organizations, except members of the deceased's regiment, were unable to enter, but waited outside. The Rev. B. W. Chidlaw, the venerable chaplain of the Thirty-ninth Ohio Regiment, made a prayer. He then announced the singing of a hymn, which he said was especially a favorite with General Noyes. It was sung to a plain chant by a quartet of four voices without accompaniment, and proved to be six stanzas from the poem of J. G. Whittier, entitled "The Eternal Goodness." The ef feet was thrilling, as the well-balanced

THE STORY OF A BLOODY BOOT

How a Shoemaker's Private Mark Solved the Mystery of an Actress's Murder.

Remarkable Work of a Parisian Detective—A Clew That Involved a Trip to America-Justice Cheated by a Tragic Death.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal.

NEW YORK, Sept 7 .- Turning the corner of Grand and Center streets yesterday my attention was drawn to an elaborate display of actresses' shoes in a store window. Dainty slippers and high-laced boots were there in profusion. Entering the place I found the manager disengaged, and, in reply to my queries, he gave me many points about the footwear of stage people. His patrons include Lottie, Minnie Palmer, Annie Pixley and others well known to theater-goers, and all have their own ideas about what constitutes a pretty shoe. They range in price from $6 to $25, made to order, of course. Referring to a pretty little boot in pale morocco and embroidered satin, the shoe-man said: "Ah! there is curious story connected with a companion pair. I don't think it has ever been printed. I picked up the last thread of it only a short time ago. It is a tragedy of the boot, and if you care to hear it I will tell it." "Gladly," I said, and he proceeded: "I don't suppose anybody remembers now the discovery of the body of a young woman in an out-of-the-way spot in a public park or garden in Berlin a couple of years ago. A three-line cable dispatch told the tale at the time. The woman was unknown. Investigation showed that it was a case of foul play. She wore good clothes, and a pair of stage boots of pale morocco and embroidered satin tops. Just why she had them on in such a place will probably never be known, for they are so delicate the evening air would spoil them—no one wears them outside of the theater. It was naturally supposed that she had been taken out after the play, or between the acts, and had never returned. There were marks of a struggle, and as her ears were torn out and the skin broken on her fingers, the purpose was evidently robbery. There was blood on her boots. There was nothing to identify her, and after a few days she was buried unknown. The Berlin detectives took her to be a Parisian, and decided that she was of the dramatic profession, but were unable to place her. They finally concluded that she was the inmate of some one of the many music-halls and dives about the German capital, and apparently let the matter drop. of these detectives, however, sent the boots to a famous Parisian detective, with notes of the case. The latter took it up and succeeded in finding the shop in Paris where such theatrical articles were made. Without telling anything about the case he pulled one of the little boots from his pocket in the presence of the foreman of the establishment. The man declared at once that they were made in his shop. He had others there just like them, for burlesque and comic opera people. A search of the books revealed no clew, however, to the purchaser. You see, if we make a pair to order or even deliver such goods we will have the name and address—very often the company the artist is with-on our blotter. like this. [Exhibiting an ordinary sales order-book.] Well, just as the French detective was about to give up the chase a workman suggested that the little boot be passed around among the hands to see who made it. That man might remember the circumstances. This was done, each work man examining the boot in turn. While they all agreed that it was made in that shop, every one denied having made it. Finally, one man asked permission to remove the lining.

"'Nothing,' said he, 'only I think I can then tell you who made it. There'll be certain mark inside." "Consent was given and out came the lining and sure enough there was a private mark of the workman.

"That was made by Jacques ____,' de-clared the man at once. 'He no longer "'Where is he now?' asked the detect-

But he let fall the remark that Jacques was a queer fellow and not only marked every bit of work he ever did. but kept a private record of the famous stage beauties who wore the products of his skill. He hannted the theaters where they played and the cafes on the grand boulevards where they sat by day and sipped their brandy and absinthe.
"This awakened the liveliest hopes in the breast of the detective. He was one of those fellows who delight in a mysterious case. The greater the difficulties the mor earnestly he set himself to work to fathom it. So he immediately communicated with Inspector Byrnes, and in a short time re-ceived such assurances as prompted him to come across the water himself. You see, it was evident that such a workman would be likely to be found where his skill re-ceived the highest recognition, and the manufacture of such goods is carried on mostly in New York, for New York consumption. The French detective brought the dead girl's boots with him. There are several places in the United States where theatrical footwear is made, but, in course of time, the maker, Jacques ----, was traced to our shop. They not only found him, but found his Parisian brother-workman's story of his peculiarities was correct. He knew of every famous dancer, opera singer, burlesque or other theatrical person he had ever made shoes for and at once recognized his bandiwork in the bloody boots of the dead unknown of Berlin. By referring to a little memorandum book kept in his native tongue he identified the purchaser as Mile. -, who traveled with Aimee in her trip to America several years ago; then with Lydia Thomp-son. He even described the woman from memory, satisfying the French detective that the dead girl and Mlle. — were identical. With this information the detective returned to Paris and easily traced the haunts of the girl, who, by the way, was a very merry individual, and the character and personality of her male companions. Slowly but surely he wound his web of circumstantial evidence about one of these admirers, or hangers-on, until he felt that he was on the right track at last. This particular one was a dissolute young man, who haunted the green-rooms of Parisian theaters and spent a good deal of money on those women he picked up there as long as his money lasted; then he lived by his wits, most of the time off the acquaintances of his prosperous days. He was often seen in Mile.—'s company. In fact, she was infatuated with him. They were tracked to Berlin, where the girl went with a traveling burlesque company. One night the detectives found him in the very same spot where the body of the murdered girl had been found two years before. It was the first time they had laid eyes upon him. From that moment they never took eyes off of him. With that singular infatuation often found in criminals, he haunted the scene of his crime. There was evidently a terrible fascination for him in the spot. He could not keep away from it. His actions gave him away when there was really no other evidence on would return to him. She refused, and which to convict him. Finally the detect-without a moment's warning he pulled out ives, shrewdly concluding that, taken under suspicious circumstances, he would break down, seized him at night alone, right where the crime was committed They were correct; he did break down, and confessed then and there, but claimed that

SUNDAY AT CRESSON.

Religious Services at the Mountain House, Which the President Attended.

CRESSON, Pa., Sept. 7 .- The sun shone out brightly to-day for the first time since the President's arrival, and a gentle breeze from the mountains prevented what would otherwise have been a hot day. The President and the members of his household, excepting Mrs. Harrison, attended divine service in the large parlor of the Mountain House this morning, at 11 o'clock. The services were conducted by Rev. George Rodgers, an Episcopal minister from Veronia, Pa. He delivered a brief sermon on the personal, moral and spiritual responsibilities of man, taking the broad ground that voluntary ignorance would not be accepted by God in palliation of religious delinquencies. Miss Jannette Halford, daughter of the President's private secretary, assisted in the singing, and sang as a solo the beautiful hymn "Angel of Charity."

In the afternoon the President went out for a long walk. He was accompanied by Mrs. Dimmick. Mrs. Harrison was somewhat indisposed during the early part of the day, but revived in the evening, and walked with the rest of the party to supper st the botal. Mr. Presell Harrison arrived at the hotel. Mr. Russell Harrison arrived here late last night, and spent the entire day with the family at the park cottage. He returned to New York this evening. Mrs. Russell Harrison expects to start for the West on next Tuesday. Mr. George Pullman stopped over here this afternoon to pay his respects to the President.

SCALPED BY INDIANS.

Section Man's Hair "Raised" by a Couple of Drunken Red Men, Near Hope, Wash. SPOKANE FALLS, Wash., Sept. 7 .- John Wolvertine, section foreman on the Northern Pacific, was knocked down and scatped by two drunken Indians near Hope, a few miles from Spokane Falls, last evening. Wolvertine was walking on the track near the station, when he was met by two Indians, one of whom he recognized as John Deer. The red-skins seemed considerably under the influence of liquor, and Wolvertine turned aside to allow them to pass. They stopped him and asked him for liquor. He replied that he had none, when John Deer struck him a blow over the head with s club, knocking him senseless. When Wolvertine recovered consciousness some time after he found his scalp missing. He crawled to a saloon some distance away, where he was cared for. His condition is considered critical. The Indians escaped.

Twenty-Six Years Without a Scalp. KANSAS CITY, Sept. 7 .- A man who bears a unique distinction, yet who is dying from that distinction, is in the city seeking surgical aid for his affliction. He is probably the only man living who has been scalped and lived twenty-five years after the terrible mutilation. The man is Robert McGee, who lives in the neighborhood of Chillicothe, Mo. The top of his head was torn off by Indians twenty-six years ago, and it has never healed, but has been constantly sapping away his life. It presents a most horrible appearance, and the physicians who are tending him say he will surely die. He tells the following story:

"I was an orphan boy without a home and by being offered $90 a month I was induced to drive a government team across the plains in the summer of 1864, and when on Walnut creek, near where Great Bend, Kan., is now located, our party was attacked by the Brule Sioux, under Little Turtle, the famous chief. He captured our outfit, and massacred the entire party except myself. I fell to the lot of the chief, who desired my scalp, and knocked me down with a spear handle. As I fell I was shot, the bail passing through my body and lodging against my ribs. The chief then made a semicircular cut around my head, and placing his foot on the back of my neck, tore the entire scalp from my head, causing untold agony which made me faint. This undoubtedly saved my life, for after shooting an arrow through my body, they left me on the plains with my murdered companions. I lay for three hours in the hot July sun until some soldiers came along, and seeing that I was still alive took me to the fort, where a surgeon succeeded in saving my life. I claim to be the only man scalped who ever lived ten years."

BASE-BALL AFFAIRS.

Where the Playing of the Past Week Placed the Various Clubs.

With only twenty-one games remaining on the schedule, Brooklyn has a reasonably sure thing of winning the League pennant, especially as her players are all in good condition and ready for a strong finish. Boston is still near enough to cause Byrne's men some uneasiness, but the other clubs are too far behind at this late day to worry the leaders. Cincinnati is altogether out of the race, for which Indianapolis people will not be sorry, and Chicago is crowding the Porkopolitans hard for fourth place.

No Ruder than the Rest.

Philadelphia Press. The New York Post explains the ballotbox outrages in Arkansas by claiming that they were to be expected after an exciting campaign "in so rude a community." The condition of society in Arkansas is no ruder than it is in Louisiana, Texas, Mississippi, Alabama, South Carolina and Florida, and it is from these States that the free-traders get the most of their votes in Congress and in the Electoral College. The Post's admission that its policy is sustained only in the "rude" communities is as truthful as it is significant. But does that paper imagine that the rest of the country proposes to permit these "rude" communities to elect whom they choose through fraud and crime on the ballot-box and so shape the policy of the country? We trow not.

The American Laborer's Share.

Nebraska Journal. At the request of Senator Carlisle, Labor Commissioner Carroll D. Wright has prepared a close statement covering the cost of manufacturing steel rails in this country and in England. He has figured in every item with the greatest nicety, and finds that in the United States the total cost of making a ton of rails is $24.67. Of this sum $11.60 is paid out in labor. In England the cost is $18.61, of which $7.82 goes to the laborer. On the continent the cost is $19.64 and the share of the laborer is $8.10. It will thus be seen that labor receives in America a much larger amount. ceives in America a much larger amount for doing this service than in Europe and at the same time a larger proportion of the entire amount expended in the production of the rails.

Careful statistics of the foreciosures of farm mortgages in Kansas will not furnish much comfort to the Democratic editors who have been trying to demonstrate that protection has plastered nearly every Western farm with a mortgage. The figures prove that the great bulk of the mort-gages are on unoccupied lands which were bought and mortgaged by speculators. The facts in regard to farm mortgages should be secured in all the Western States, as they would spike the heaviest guns of a large number of virulent free-trade newspapers.

Peculiar

To itself in many important particulars, Hood's Sarsaparilla is different from and superior to any other medicine.

Peculiar in combination, proportion and preparation of ingredients, Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses the full curative value of the best known remedies of the vegetable kingdom.

Peculiar in its medicinal merit, Hood's Sarsaparilla accomplishes cures hitherto unknown. Peculiar in strength and economy-Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which can truly be said, "100 doses one dollar." Medicines in larger and smaller bottles require larger doses, and do not produce as good results as Hood's Sarsaparilla. Peculiar in its "good name at home" - there is more of Hood's Sarsaparitla sold in Lowell, where it is made, than of all other blood purifiers. Peculiar in its phenomenal record of sales abroad, no other preparation has ever attained such popularity in so short a time. Do not be induced to take any other preparation. Besure to get Hood's Sarsaparilla

Sold by all druggists. $1; six for $5. Prepared only by C. I. HOOD & CO., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass. 100 Doses One Dollar
